Is there any further information you wish to supply in support of your application?

The National Aquarium of New Zealand has amassed a significant handling collection over a number of years that is used in educational programming for schools and public audiences.

The handling collection houses a number of mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians, fish, invertebrates and some plant material. Recently the collection was fully investigated, with specimens given accession numbers and relevant information on provinance etc. recorded. Some of the specimens in the collection have been identified as native species, specifically requiring a DoC WAA permit, and others as 'unknown' that would require expert consultation to identify them to species level.

The National Aquarium currently delivers a Ministry of Education contract for Learning Experiences Outside the Classroom, with 16,000 students visiting over a 3 year period. A DoC WAA permit is sought to continue to use these specimens of native species in educational programming at the National Aquarium, to enrich learning experiences for visitors.

Due to some of the collection being unidentifiable to species level, a full inventory fo the collection will be provided as part of this application.
